GERMAN STATES O. K. SURRENDER

Final Step in Acknowledging Loss of 'War After War'

AT MERCY OF ALLIES

No Effort To Be Made to Save Government 'Face'

BERLIN, Sept. 25.—The German state premiers, in their conference with Chancellor Stresemann today, fully approved the decision of the government to abandon passive resistance in the Ruhr without further conditions.

Approval of the state premiers followed that of the Rhine and Ruhr organizations, given at their conferences with the chancellery.

Proclamation Considered.

It was interpreted as the final step before Stresemann's public announcement which will be Germany's acknowledgment to the world that she has lost the "war after the war" and virtually throws herself on the mercy of the allies.

According to the latest information, it has not yet been decided definitely in what form the chancellery's public announcement would be made first, but information obtained by the United Press indicated that an official proclamation is being considered. If made it probably will be a brief document stating the decision to abandon resistance without conditions but expressing hope that the allies will exercise leniency.

No Excuses by Chancellor.

It may be, informants said, that the idea of a public proclamation will be abandoned and that the chancellor merely will state verbally in the Reichstag the result of his conversations with the Rhine-Ruhr leaders and the state premiers, or it may be that both the proclamation and the Reichstag report will be used.

At any rate it was indicated that Stresemann will make little effort to "save the face" of his government. He assumes full responsibility for the decision and will tell the facts dispassionately, without excuses.

6182 Pupils in City Schools—28% Boost Over 1922

AT THE END of the first week of the 1923-24 school term, 6,182 students are enrolled in the city schools, George M. Sims, superintendent reported today.

This is an increase of 339 over the number of students enrolled on the opening day of school, recorded at 5,843, Sims said. During the first week, the high school enrollment grew from 710 to 725, an increase of 15 students; Franklin school added 49 students, the enrollment growing from 2,628 on the opening day to 2,777 at the end of the first week, the report sets forth.

Other city schools reporting increases during the first week were DeQueen, gaining 39 students, increasing the opening day total of 1,075 to 1,114; Lamar school grew from 272 students the first day to 293 at the close of the week, a gain of 21; and Lincoln school, for negroes, increased 110 students the first week, growing from 1,093 to 1,213.

For the opening day of the 1922-23 season, the school enrollment in Port Arthur is reported at 4,843, or 1,339 students less than are found in the schools at the close of the first week this year.

At all the city schools, with the exception of the school at Griffing, where five students less than enrolled on the opening day were in school at the close of the first week, increases over the first day enrollment were reported by school officials today.

Sea Scouts from 3 States to Train in Pt. Arthur Camp

Site To Be Designated Here Soon for Concentration Point and Training School For Ninth Region

Establishment of a training school and concentration point in Port Arthur for Sea Scout crews from three states in the ninth region, Boy Scouts of America, looms today as an assured fact.

This is the word from Captain Roderick H. Steele, director of the Port Arthur Sea Scouts activities, following a conference with J. P. Fitch, director of the ninth region, during his visit here Saturday.

Further details and plans for locating the Sea Scouts headquarters in Port Arthur are expected to be worked out with Director Fitch when he returns to Port Arthur Wednesday and Thursday of this week, Captain Steele said.

Take Top Rank

"Port Arthur's Sea Scouts and their equipment place them at the peak of sea scouts throughout the states of Texas, Oklahoma and New Mexico, which comprise the ninth scout region," Captain Steele said. "Right now we have enough equipment to train 100 boys."

"Our natural advantages of location on Lake Sabine and with easy access to the Gulf of Mexico are ideal for a great concentration and training point for sea scouts. I am reasonably confident that the scout officials will select this city as the site for their proposed headquarters," Captain Steele said.

Trips out on the Gulf of Mexico, sailing and scouting on Lake Sabine through the ship canal to orange and Lake Charles, and instruction in seamanship from expert mariners are other features pointed out by Captain Steele to comment on Port Arthur to scout officials in their concentration and training place for sea scouts.

Mercy For Hundreds

Among the final details which are yet to be worked out by Director Fitch is the selection of a site for the sea scouts camp. Captain Steele said Organization of sea scout crews is already under way in Orange and Lake Charles, and Port Arthur officials are preparing to increase the number of crews in this port from three to seven, he said.

Wherever there is access to rivers or lakes, sea scout crews can be organized, Captain Steele said. Added to this the natural appeal that ships, water, sailing and seamanship have for boys, Captain Steele expressed the belief that hundreds of scouts from the state of the ninth region would assemble in Port Arthur with the establishment of the proposed training camp and concentration point.

EXECUTIVES AND COUNTY CLASH

Refuses to Permit Convicts To Appear

'PRODUCE THEM'—DAVIS

Solicitor Threatens to Take Inquisitors to Mines

By United Press.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Sept. 25.—Roy L. Nolan, personal representative of Governor W. W. Brandon today appeared before the county grand jury investigating conditions in the Banner convict mines. Appearance of Nolan brought to a head the clash of the county officials with the governor over power of the grand jury to investigate conditions in the prison camps.

Danied Pen Witnesses.

The governor has denied the grand jury the right to question convicts or to visit prison mines.

Following Nolan's appearance it was expected a subpoena would be issued for the governor.

Reflector James Davis in charge of the grand jury investigation today said that unless prisoners requested for witnesses are produced, the grand jury will be taken to the Banner mines and admittance demanded.

Indications were that the grand jurors will get no further than the barred and guarded gates of the wooden stockade surrounding the camp.

These gates are closely guarded since the grand jury began its investigation of charges that cruel abuses led to the mutiny two weeks ago of several hundred convict miners, following which 17 of the ring leaders were hanged. The camp is located in the hills, 20 miles from Birmingham, a rambling cluster of frame buildings, surrounded by a stockade of boards and barbed wire. Visitors are refused admittance.

Brutality Claimed.

Mail is censored and newspapers have been barred since the grand jury investigation started. The camp, although a state prison, is located on the property of the Pratt Consolidated Coal company and the prisoners there are leased by the state to that company. They are under its control while in the workings and under state control while outside.

The grand jury is investigating rumors that Banner convicts are worked 12, 14 or 16 hours a day that the mines are so crowded a convict can scarcely get out his allotted amount of coal or must labor long hours to do so; that prisoners have been compelled to work while sick and injured, that they have been strung up by the wrists until almost dead, helped to move for whole days or nights, and with feet scarcely touching the ground.

Should national powers in politics decree that Coolidge take a back seat, Senator Jim Watson of Indiana and Governor Pinchot of Pennsylvania are regarded as "possibilities," but it is understood that the Texas delegation will go down fighting for the nomination of President Coolidge to succeed himself.

COOLIDGE CHOICE OF TEXAS G. O. P.

Col. Dunn Back from Meeting Sees President's Support

Backers of presidential timber other than Calvin Coolidge on the republican side of the fence will have to look elsewhere than to Texas for support. This was the consensus of opinion voiced at the meeting of the republican state executive committee Saturday at Dallas, attended by more than 200 prominent republicans of this state.

Colonel Dunn, recently appointed customs collector for this port, attended the meeting preparatory to resigning his place on the republican state and Jefferson county committees.

As the colonel saw it, the republican ranks are to be bolstered in Texas within the next few months in order to give a better balance of political power between the reps and democrats of the state.

Possibility of Texas' vote in the electoral college being reduced was taken up at the meeting. The present number of votes of the Texas delegation is 42. Four of these are at large and one for the senatorial districts of the state. Should the reorganization of electoral votes be brought about, it is understood, four votes will be allowed the state at large and one each on the basis of representation on the floor of the Harding-Coolidge vote in 1929.

Should national powers in politics decree that Coolidge take a back seat, Senator Jim Watson of Indiana and Governor Pinchot of Pennsylvania are regarded as "possibilities," but it is understood that the Texas delegation will go down fighting for the nomination of President Coolidge to succeed himself.

MAY MEET IN U. S. BUILDING

State Guards Would Have No Jurisdiction

'KILL IF NECESSARY'

Governor Shows Teeth by Killing Highway Contract

By United Press.

OKLAHOMA CITY, Sept. 25.—Oklahoma legislators moved today to hold their extraordinary session, scheduled for the capitol at tomorrow noon, in the federal building according to a story in the Oklahoma News this afternoon.

The decision to arrange for a meeting in the federal building was reached late today after an all night session following the issuance of the governor's order last night "to shoot to kill if necessary" to prevent the contemplated session at the capitol.

Negotiations.

Leaders of the movement for an extra session were in conference with federal officials here today relative to the use of the federal building.

National guardsmen could not be used to break up the assembly of the solons within the building or prevent their entrance, legislative leaders asserted, declaring any action would be in effect a movement against the United States government.

Simultaneous with the latest move of the legislators came the filing of a petition with the state supreme court by R. D. Sanford, sheriff of Tulsa county, asking that the court take "original jurisdiction" in ousting officers of the national guard, enforcing martial law over the county from his office.

The petition was filed against Adjutant General B. H. Markham, Colonel E. G. Head and Lieutenant H. H. Donohue, national guard officers.

In the petition, Sanford charges the military officials as "usurpers with no authority of law." No action has been taken in the case.

Oklahoma legislators continued to assemble here today despite the statewide order of the governor calling for all able-bodied men between 21 and 45 to hold themselves in readiness to repulse any attempt of the legislators to meet at the capitol Wednesday noon.

The house members have been coming throughout the day and they will be here ready to march to the capitol tomorrow noon. They are not children to be intimidated by the governor's threats. "We will meet," was the answer of W. L. Cunningham, representative of Sapulpa, speaking for the legislative gathering today.

Troops at the capitol continued their regular vigilance today, not visibly strengthened as the zero hour at solons' meeting loomed less than 24 hours distant. No strengthening of the guard about the headquarters of the military court at a local hotel was apparent, although the governor has indicated that additional troops will be in the city before tomorrow noon.

With the showdown for the legislature on hand, the trial of J. C. Jewett, grand juror of the Oklahoma Klan at liberty under bond upon charges of riot, was continued for two weeks upon the request of Jewett's attorneys here today.

The first kuklux from legislative opposition, led by W. D. Melroe of Duncan, to the governor was revealed today in an announcement by Walton that he had ordered a million dollar fight on contract for land surfaced track in Stephens county held up in delay.

The governor charged that W. D. Melroe, represented from Stephens county and one of the leading advocates for an extra session, was using the influence of his office in the interest of a "moment truce" in Oklahoma.

Governor After Melroe.

The Stephens county project was one of federal aid, according to the governor. The charges against Melroe will be investigated immediately, it was indicated. The climax of the members of the house here awaiting the extra session attempt, scheduled for tonight, may be interrupted by state troops, according to the governor today. In answer to the question regarding state interference, the governor replied, "I might happen. I have given orders that meetings of the Unions will not be allowed."

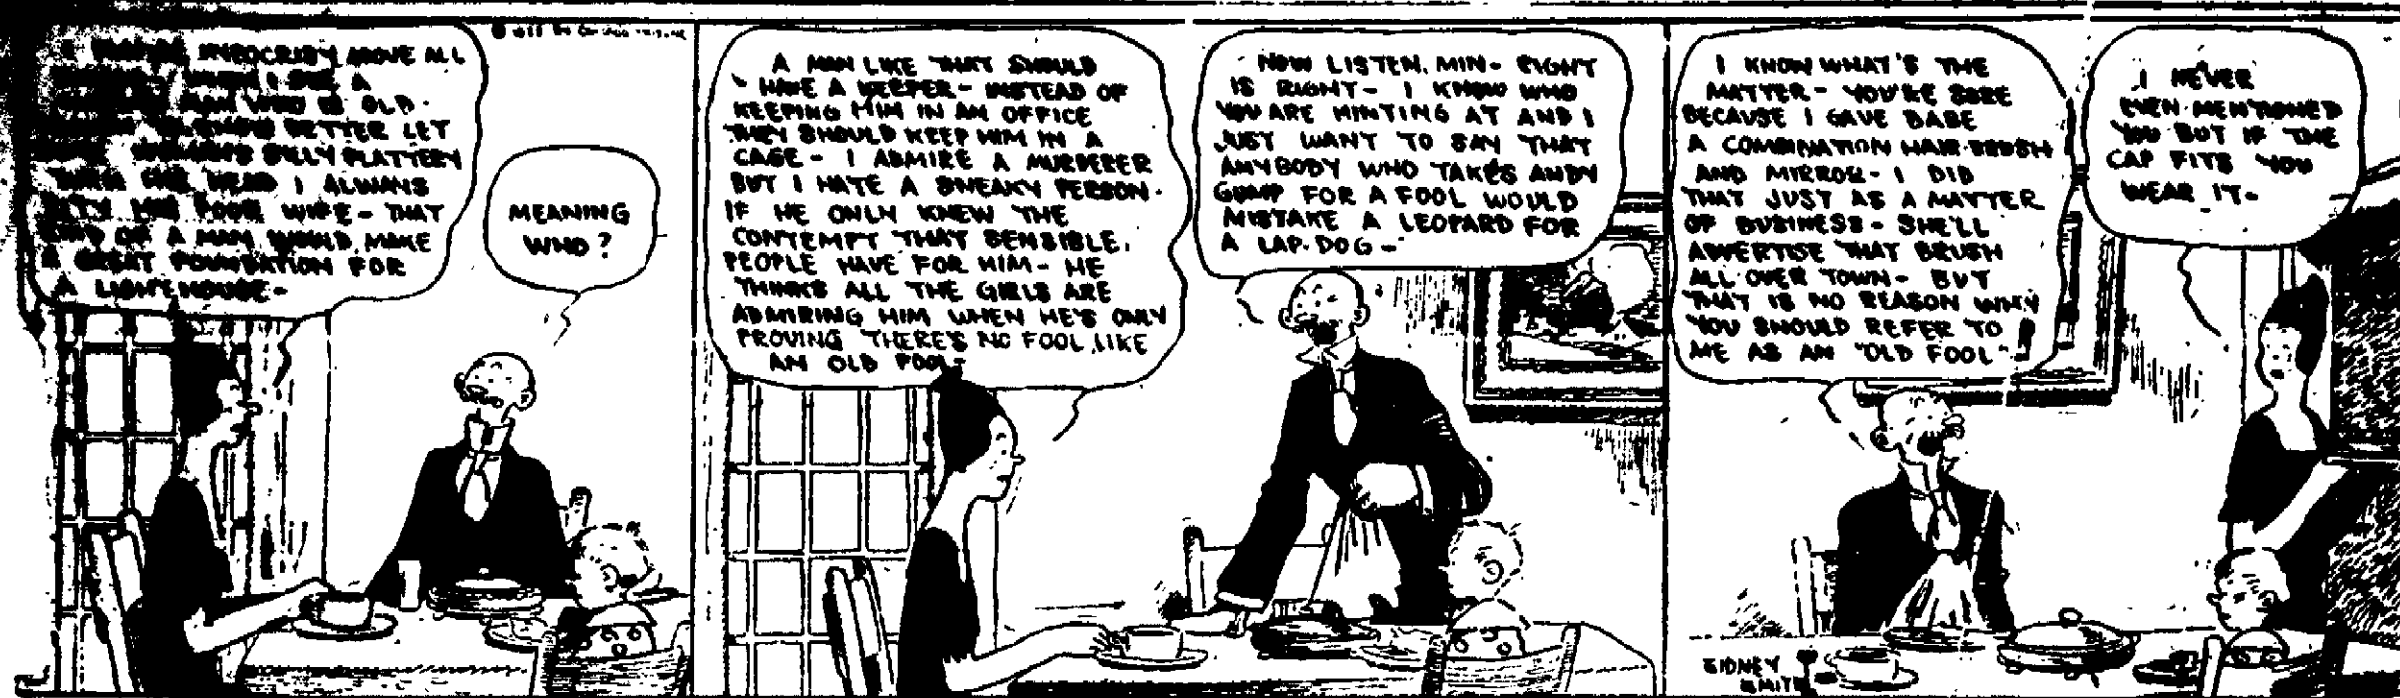

Some house members were scheduled to caucus tonight to elect a new speaker, once an appeal for public funds and complete details for tomorrow noon's session.

ORANGE C. OF C. TO URGE BOND ELECTION CALL

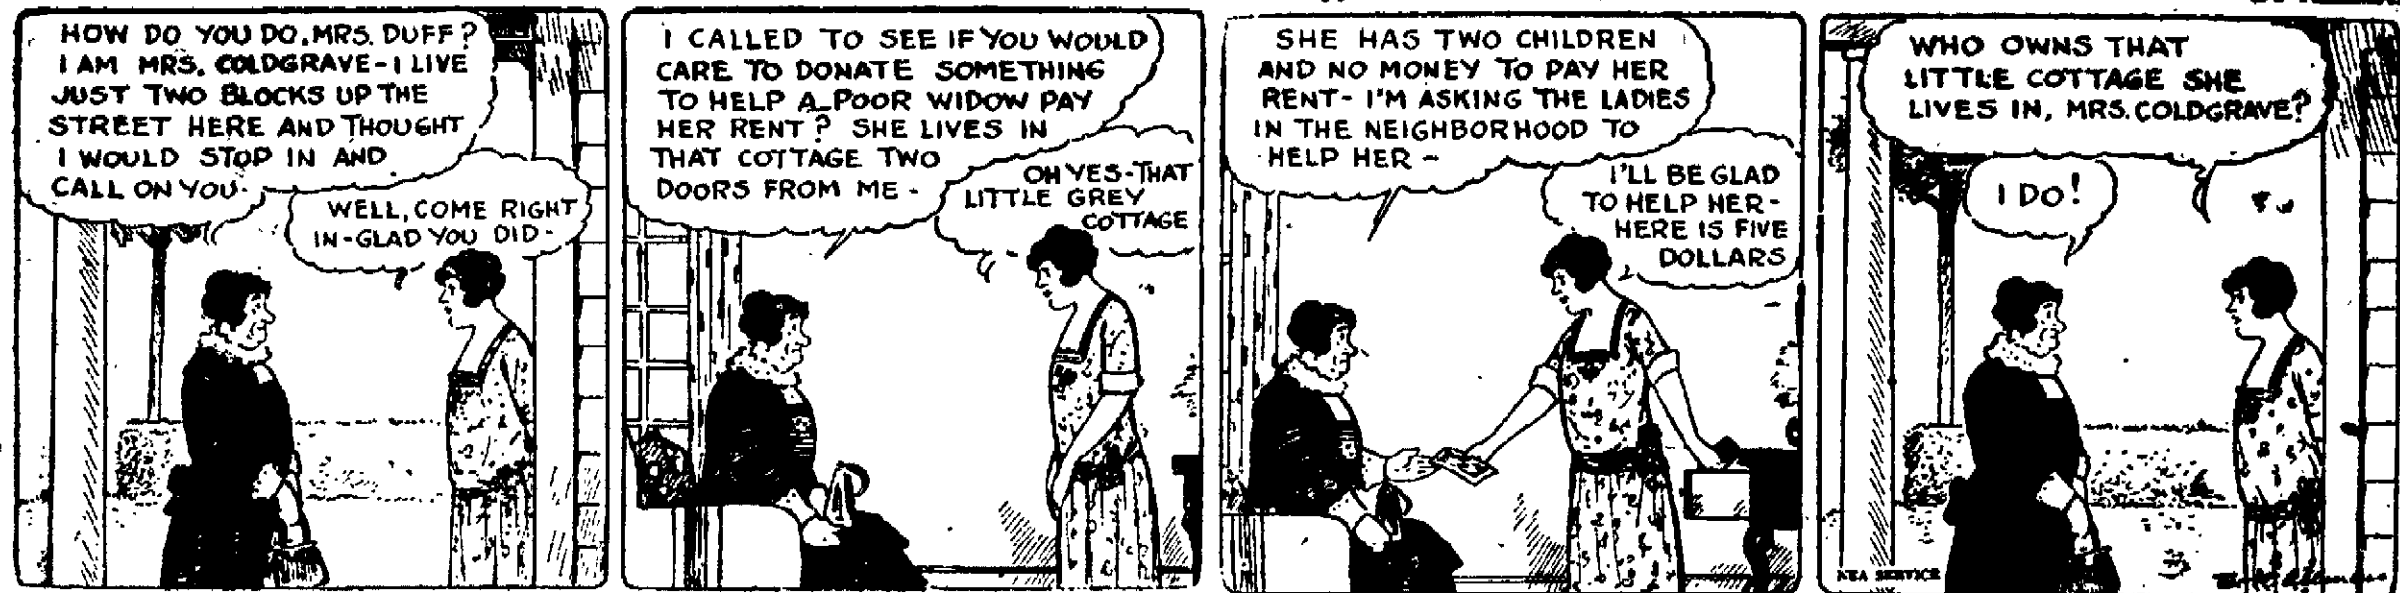

SAN ANTONIO, Sept. 25.—The regular monthly meeting of the Orange Chapter of Commerce Thursday night will be given over to the discussion of the proposed Orange-Port Arthur concrete highway, according to an announcement made by officials of that organization today. Plans are now being considered for calling an election sometime in October to vote bonds to cover the project.

"Oh, no!" said Nancy, clapping her hands, and Nick was so overjoyed he couldn't think of anything but, "Oh, gee! Won't that be grand?" He wasn't allowed to say "gee" at all! But he forgot. As they were riding on their ponies up the narrow mountain trail, Mister Gallop said: "The Indian's name is Unpetah and he used to be a medicine man. If he's in a talkative mood he may tell us a story." Unpetah was sitting outside his tepee smoking a pipe and enjoying the moonlight. He was in a very good humor and said "Nice Squaw" and "Nice brave" to the twins and also said something in sign language to Mister Gallop which the twins couldn't understand. "Yes, I'll have a pipe, thanks," answered Mister Gallop. "But no kumkum, if you please! I'll smoke my own tobacco. Indian tobacco is too strong. There now! Everybody's all hunky dory. Unpetah. Could we have a story? These kiddies are perfect story hounds. I guess it's up to you to play Sandman." Unpetah understood and smiled. "M! A story! I will tell you a story 'bout something you see on the moon. What is on the moon? What do you see?" "A man's face," said Nick. "A lady's face," said Nancy. "Mountains," suggested Mister Gallop. "Yes, but more," nodded Unpetah wisely. "Take this magic glass and look. Now what do you see?" From his belt he took a small piece of dark glass shaped like a watch crystal, and handed it to Nancy. Nancy reached for it eagerly and put it to her eye. "Why, I see a rabbit," she cried excitedly. "It looks as though it were jumping into a fire! Do look, Nick and see if you don't notice it too." "Yes, it is a rabbit!" he declared. "I tell you about him," nodded Unpetah, putting the glass safely away. "And I will tell you why he jumps into the fire. That's my story." (To Be Continued)

GUARD APPETITE LOST BALLOON SAYS DENTIST IN RACE DOWN

Don't Be a Glutton, Is His Warning Two Pilots Injured—Total Dead Reach Five

CLEVELAND, Sept. 25.—It is the duty of a dentist to teach you WHAT and HOW to eat! That is the surprising statement of Dr. J. P. Buckley of Los Angeles, retiring president of the American Dental Association. Recently, at a convention of 10,000 dentists here, he presented theories on what he termed the most significant of all questions viewed from the broad standpoint of health. "Those who from habit or disease have learned to eat less daily than they heretofore have done now realize with surprise how little food properly selected and properly masticated, is necessary to maintain health," he says. "Gluttony is one of the worst and most pernicious habits of the times. Though a difficult thing to do, for the benefit of the public health, it may become necessary to adopt a twelfth amendment to the constitution to regulate the eating as well as the drinking habit. "None can deny that the liquor traffic has ever been the curse of the ages. It has caused more misery, suffering and death than all the pestilence and wars that were ever known; AND YET, GLUTTONY TODAY IS CLAIMING MORE VICTIMS THAN DRUNKENNESS EVER DID. It is the duty of the dentist to teach people what and how to eat. A balanced diet, properly masticated, coupled with correct habits of living and the right mental attitude, will absolutely eliminate the necessity for the tooth brush."

BANDIT'S LIFE IS RECALLED

He Was Inspiration for Dime Novel

BARTLESVILLE, Okla., Sept. 25.—It's Al Spencer's life people talk about now. Not his death. This super-bandit, who was a diseased mind and a misguided love of adventure, was the inspiration for years for writers of dime novels. Now he is gone—shot down on a highway near here as mercilessly as one would kill a poisonous snake.

Yes, Al Spencer's life, as they say out here, "and townspeople are breathing easier. For the terror of the Oage is no more."

They called him "Will o' the Wisp" Spencer. He who robbed banks, looted stores, sealed prison walls and fled to the hills.

Young, romantic, fearless—he couldn't help appeal to that portion of the population of the country that fed on false idealism.

"Someone may get me," he always said, "but I'll manage to get someone while they're doing it."

But he didn't.

Shot Down

The end came suddenly. Trapped on the Washington-Oage road by Marshal Alva McDonald, and a group of others whose duty it is to rid society of human monsters, he broke free. Sharp commands to halt met only with the bark of a rifle in the hands of the bandit. A half dozen guns spoke, and Al fell.

Hanks especially liked it's over now. They had many rewards posted for his capture. "Dead or alive." For Spencer was the most notorious bandit since the days of the James and Dalton brothers. The government recently added $10,000 to the general reward.

He operated in the southwest. Oklahoma was his favorite state. For then he could raid and dash to the Oage hills, where he knew every creek, cliff and cave. He has been reported in Kansas, Texas, Arkansas and Missouri.

Recently he walked into one of the biggest hotels in Oklahoma City. He talked with several persons, smoked a cigar and drove away.

At times he would adopt the modern bandit's auto. But once his "work" was done, once the "job" was pulled, he would mount his horse—just like they do in the movies.

At his death he was 39. He had the typical cold steel gray eyes of the bandit—the kind that shine hatred of law and its consequences.

Escaped

Spencer started his desperado career in youth. His escapades were famous when he was arrested as a cattle rustler at Nowata, Okla. Given a 10-year term he finally was made a trusty. That trust was misplaced for Spencer disappeared.

Then commenced a long list of raids, and one escape from prison. Dozens of banks fell his victim, it is said. At Gentry he was shot down, but dragging himself to his horse, escaped.

He had his own gang, man-picked for individual cruelty, desperate characters willing to take chances, and born to the thieves' code of "once

GIANT MAKES CHAMPION LOOK SMALL

Jack Dempsey champion heavyweight of the world, pictured here on recent visit to the Hagenbeck-Wallace Shows where he compared his height with that of Jim Traver, the side-show giant with the Circus. Traver and many other interesting attractions will be found in the annex when this large organization comes to town on Thursday, September 27th.

HUGE PARADE ON CIRCUS DAY

Hagenbeck-Wallace Shows Here Thursday

It is only a short time now until the circus will be here—the Carl Hagenbeck-Wallace, the premier wild animal show of the world, which will arrive early in the morning on Thursday next for exhibition that afternoon and evening on the circus grounds at 18th street and Holland avenue. And of course the big street parade will take place as scheduled at 11 a. m.

The younger members of the family are sure to be up early on Circus Day and hurrying to the railroad yards to witness the unloading wonders and marvel at the manner in which the noted Hagenbeck elephants, camels and horses step from the double-length railroad cars. Then the roar of the lions and tigers, as well as the other "cat" animals, from their cages behind big canvas coverings, are sure to strike awe and respect among the kiddies.

Introduction of circus day is officially scheduled for 11 a. m. when the mile-long street parade leaves the circus grounds and starts its procession over the principal streets of the city. And the parade is sure to convey an idea of what the performance is to be like.

New and novel features have been assembled by the management for the 1935 transcontinental tour, but unusual, the trained wild animal acts captured, never talk.

If it is said Spencer had a romance in his life. The girl thought to have won his heart now is under arrest, captured during a train robbery at Okema.

When killed, Spencer had $10,000 in bonds.

are featured. Two groups of lions and tigers, eleven each, will be worked in the steel arena, while other unusual stunts, such as tiger riding on an elephant's back, the lions and bears riding horseback, will also be shown. Months were spent by the trainers in perfecting these acts for popular consumption this summer, and they are said to be the best in animal training. In addition the equestrians, the bare-back riders, the acrobats, the trapeze artists, the aerialists, the perch artists, and the clowns will work toward one object, making the Hagenbeck-Wallace performance superior to that offered by any other circus.

A downtown ticket office will be established at the Hart Drug Co. store, where tickets will be sold at the same price as charged on the grounds.

MESOPOTAMIA EXPECTS FAMED U. S. SCIENTISTS

BAGDAD, Sept. 25.—With the object of founding a school of archaeology Professor Albert T. Clay, the eminent American assyriologist of New York and New Haven, and Professor E. T. Merrill, famous philologist, are expected in Mesopotamia shortly.

The United States consulate at Bagdad is momentarily expecting the arrival of the Babylonian library, with its almost unique and complete range of research books, and two American students already have arranged to take up a lengthy course of study.

The establishment of the school is expected to have an important effect on the future of the country and draw local attention to the enormous field for research.

Tourist facilities are being strengthened in view of the expected influx of tourists and students.

DEAD STAMPER, GIRL ATTACKED

German Immigrant Victim in Gotham Park

NEW YORK, Sept. 25.—Firemen joined police in a search through West Central park and the adjoining fashionable apartment district for six men who stabbed a young German immigrant as he sat on a park bench with his sweetheart, covered his bleeding form with newspapers and dragged the struggling girl away.

The couple was attacked shortly after midnight. Two hours later George Holland, the youth, regained consciousness. He staggered to the nearest park exit and collapsed beneath a fire box, after pulling an alarm which brought fire apparatus and police reserves. He may die.

ORANGE, Texas, Sept. 25.—The steamer Indiana, one of the more than 40 shipping board lake-type steamers being held in government storage here, will probably be turned over to the bureau of fisheries at Washington within the next 30 days, according to information given out here. Captain G. W. Carlson of the bureau of fisheries has just completed a survey of the vessel here and has returned to Washington to report to officials of the bureau on her condition.

'Buried' by Folks, Tim Home to Find Insurance Paid Up

PORTAGE, Wis., Sept. 25.—Believers who a few weeks ago believed they had buried Timothy Collins, 63, a widower, were due for a shock Tuesday night when Collins left here for his old home at Montello to prove that he is very much alive.

"Tim," as he is known, left Montello, a little town 30 miles from Portage, last spring for the west. He lost his handbag at Minneapolis but continued on his way to the coast. Recently the body of a man was found beside the railroad tracks at Port Snelling. It was identified as the body of Collins, was sent to Montello and buried there. Relatives collected $2000 insurance that Collins carried in the Catholic Order of Foresters.

Tuesday Tim alighted from a train at Portage and was soon recognized in stores where he had traded.

"I thought you were dead," exclaimed John A. Graham, druggist, as Tim walked into Graham's store.

"It's the first I've heard of it," remarked Tim.

Collins left at 4:30 p. m. for Montello where his son resides. Collins' cousin, Timothy Vaughn, is the town marshal of Montello.

Follow this, that, that...

Are very disagreeable, both to yourself and to those with whom you come in contact. In the majority of cases, bad breath is caused by a disordered stomach, accompanied by a sour taste in the mouth, and a feeling of fullness and indigestion, with the result that the food you eat irritates the stomach tissues and leads to a condition which sometimes becomes very dangerous.

There are two methods to relieve this condition. Either the sufferer can go without food for a considerable time, or can eat what they like and counteract the bad effects of the food, and prevent the formation of gas, or the pangs of heartburn by the use of PAT-AN-U-LIK.

PAT-AN-U-LIK has proven to be a safe and reliable indigestion remedy. Produced from the formula of a stomach specialist, it affords instant relief for indigestion, sour acid upbush, heartburn, gas on the stomach and any kindred ills.

PAT-AN-U-LIK is sold under a positive guarantee. Druggists are authorized to refund your money if it fails.

Assume an Off-the-Face Attitude

ORIGINALITY definitely is expressed in the newest modes. No longer will my lady shade her eyes from admiring glances. The new brims, small as they are—all turn up from the face in varied and unusual ways. They are hats for all occasions, close fitting and snug for motoring, dancing and shopping—Always dressy enough yet retaining a smart simplicity that will assure their popularity among discerning women. Velvet is destined to be the leading fabric of the season but moire, Hatter's plush and other deep pile fabrics are smart.

The trimmings though simple are unusual. Feathers are of paramount importance. Whether ostrich or coques—they are set at fascinating angles. Some simpler models may just have a pin deftly placed or a ribbon pom pom.

YOU AND I

YOUR CO-OP

You remember the good old days when you could buy a fine meal for a quarter. The army is doing better than that. It will feed each of the 30,000 young men who attend the Citizens' Military Training Camps this summer at a cost of 70 cents a day for three meals.

The quartermaster general says he could give them the regular army chuck at 45 cents a day apiece. But an additional 25 cents has been provided, to furnish fancy eats, such as the 30,000 may happen to be accustomed to in civilian life.

Each man daily will get, in addition to the regulation menu, a pint of fresh milk or buttermilk, a salad for dinner, and cereal and fresh fruit for breakfast. These four items alone would cost 70 cents or more in the average restaurant.

To the person who eats in restaurants or does the market-basket shopping for a family, the low cost of feeding the army is the eighth wonder of the world.

And yet it's a marvel only by contrast.

In the first place, the army gets the advantage of co-operative buying—big orders, at wholesale prices. The middlemen are, to considerable extent, eliminated.

Then, comparing with restaurant prices and management: The restaurant has high overhead which the army in most cases avoids—high rents, insurance, semi-compulsory charitable donations, kitchen waste which in the army would be punished, higher-priced "help," cost of soliciting business, more fragile equipment, and probably the expenses of orchestra or other alluring entertainment.

The restaurant man will point out that one of the most vital of these items is that the army's "70 cents a day per man" doesn't include any labor charges.

The solution of certain phases of the high cost of living may be in army organization. For instance, if 25 or 50 families in a neighborhood standardized their meals and clubbed together to buy their supplies co-operatively, they could get wholesale prices, or nearly so.

Some visionaries have even predicted a day when cooking will be a community job. Meals would be prepared at a certain number of branch stations and carried home by the housewives or delivered to them in thermos boxes. Enough variety, of course, to permit a wide selection. The bakery idea, expanded and socialized.

These municipal kitchens may be visionary. But the idea of co-operative buying is practicable. When such ventures fail, it is usually due to defective organization and peanut politics.

LABOR DRAFT

Bulgaria is trying out a labor draft. It's modeled after the military conscription system by which all able-bodied males have to serve a certain length of time in the army.

This labor draft applies to women as well as men. It requires all members of both sexes—unless legitimately entitled to exemption—to perform a certain amount of work on behalf of the state.

The period of service is eight months for men and four months for women. It may be demanded at any age between 20 and 40 years for men and 16 and 30 for women.

Here, we believe, is something new in history—conscription for peace-time service. It's a novelty. But it's workable, for the average person unquestionably would rather be drafted to work during peace for the common good than for battle service.

The labor draft, being tried out in Bulgaria, has interesting possibilities. Playing no favorites (theoretically, at least) it should help break down any caste system and eliminate snobbery, just as army service under conscription places all draft victims on a common level.

A common level is the ideal of what we call democracy. The idea of a peace-time labor draft might not appeal to Americans, but we have plenty of drones for whom a little compulsory work would do worlds of good.

As our money aristocracy continues developing along roads now clearly laid out, something like a labor draft may become an imperative necessity, to put the brakes on the system and help maintain a semblance of balance.

For rich and parasite idlers we'd recommend a few months' service at street cleaning or highway building.

As you ponder the possibilities of a labor-draft system, maybe the same thought will strike you that occurs to us: We are creating in our country a financial aristocracy, with hundreds of degrees of money caste. And this is the gravest danger facing our democracy.

Autocracies usually are destroyed from without, democracies from within.

Democracy is born as a co-operation of the impoverished. It has its source in money. And in money is the fatal germ most apt to kill it.

The snobbery and idleness that are made possible by wealth, coupled with greed for more wealth, destroy the democratic spirit of working for the common good. A labor draft, in the form of a net from which none could escape, might be an antidote for many of the problems that our nation is attempting to handle as matters of education and emotion. As in war, a labor draft could be camouflaged as "selective service."

And, while we were at it, we might during the draft period sentence the poor to a taste of the luxury enjoyed by the rich, and the rich to a taste of the terrific grind and near-privation endured by the poor as habitual routine. A social leveler? You bet!

"STEP ON 'ER AND GET HIM!"

The driver of the big, heavy car swerved it aside as a belated little gopher ran across the road just ahead. He had the instinct to demonstrate his dexterity at the wheel by killing.

"You got him," shouted the man in the rear seat who was looking out the back window to see the result. And the driver smiled in satisfaction and brought his car back into the line of traffic.

It is difficult to see how anyone could get joy out of that flattened, crushed bit of bone and hair which a minute before had been full of the life of the wild. Yet we do see drivers swerve in an attempt to strike a dog or a chicken. The dog may be a pest and the chicken may have a blind instinct to "cross the road." But the attempt to kill them hurts the man who makes it.

And the roadways that run through fields and forests, tell a story of the slaughter of little animals that is to be deplored. Once in a while the death of one of these animals is unavoidable. But most of them are the victims of the "step-on-her-and-get-him" craze. When are we all going to see that there is a sanctity in the life of God's creatures which makes their needless slaughter pure depravity?

William Gibbs McAdoo declared that the government did not take over the rails until the private owners had failed utterly in their efforts to provide the war transportation. Is this an argument for the government taking over the railways in the near future? Or is it an indictment of the Wall Street system of railway operation?

BEGIN HERE TODAY

Loring Ranger offers a hundred thousand dollar reward for the return of his daughter, Hope, who has disappeared. Ranger is assisted in his search by his two friends, Kestley, a highly trained detective, and Charles, a highly trained detective.

A message comes to Hope's father instructing him to buy her a hat and dress in a certain place. This command is carried out by Ranger and Kestley, who find the hat and dress in a certain place.

The next message from Hope's father tells Ranger to leave one hundred thousand dollars worth of bonds under a certain railroad crossing. At Dr. Brainerd's sanatorium, George Kestley and the supposed sister of Nurse Copley become acquainted.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

He settled down now to a relaxed watchfulness. A long string of cars came along from out of town, then an almost equally long string from the opposite direction; a couple of trucks and then continuing two men, a trio of automobiles came up from the south and the fiver stopped, its driver getting out to fuss with the engine.

The three cars came up and passed. Nothing else was in sight in either direction. The driver of the fiver climbed quickly back into his seat and started for the east.

"Two minutes is all I can allow the man," Charlie whispered excitedly.

The long indicator of the stop-watch swept around its circle. One minute gone. Another round, and still the car stayed down in the cut. Before it came into view again, there had elapsed exactly three minutes and 20 seconds.

Hardly did the top of it appear over the edge of the dip before Charlie, slipping the stop-watch into his pocket, swung down through the branches.

He rushed across the "jungle" and jerking his motorcycle out from under its concealing pile of brush, pulled it into the road. But when he attempted to start, he found the mechanism gone dead. Impatiently he leaned over to see what was the matter, and found to his amazement that the spark plug was missing. Hastily he rummaged in his tool-bag for another, but although he would have sworn he had three spare plugs, there was none to be found.

Then he suddenly froze. On the flap of the tool-bag was chalked a note: "X" within a circle—the sign of the Combine.

The thing was plain enough to him now. In spite of all his efforts at camouflage, his artful twists and turns, the agents of the Combine had evidently succeeded in trailing him to the "jungle," and there while he slept, had effectively put him out of the running.

Charlie cast up his eyes, as he himself would have expressed it, like a dying duck, and wretchedly shook his head. He was facing down the road toward its junction with the Lone Hill road on the other side of the railway; and now there swept across his field of vision the suspected fiver.

Driven hard in its progress toward town, it had covered the distance down from the archway during the two or three minutes that he had spent in lamentation. Charlie's plan had been to lead it along the highway on his motorcycle and let it overtake and pass him, so as not to give the suggestion of pursuit. Now the sight of it, stunning triumphantly by its own speed, added poignancy to his humiliation.

Then suddenly his fingers went flapping at the leather case which held his field-glasses. He noticed that the rear left wheel of the fiver carried a new tire, and remembering that the Lone Hill road had just been freshly oiled, it gave him a new idea.

He jumped to his feet and leveled his glasses on the fiver's whirling wheels. A little thrill of hope woke in him. His eyes had not been mistaken. The three old tires had a smooth tread; that of the fourth was corrugated. Perhaps—perhaps it might be possible to follow that spoor on the oily roadway.

He bent another look through the glasses at the back of the speeding car to take the number on its license-plate. It was 2-155-633.

"You never can tell," he screwed up his lips. "Chances are that it's a false number but they might have forgotten to shift. Anyway, that and the tire tracks are the only clues I've got, and I'll take 'em for what they're worth."

So, pushing the crippled motorcycle beside him, he hurried on in the fiver's wake.

CHAPTER IX
 Dr. Bristow was sitting at his desk in the outer office of his suite going over a pile of letters.

The clock on the mantelpiece had just struck nine, and Bristow's brows puckered as he surveyed the accumulation of mail yet to be considered. He had set down to it immediately after dinner and was still not half through.

As he picked up the next envelope and drew out its enclosure, there came a tap on the door. Before he could respond, this was pushed open and Anita Copley entered.

"Ah, Anita!" he greeted her with a smile. "Strictly on time and I've scarcely begun. No more of it for me tonight, anyway. Well, he thrust the pile of letters away from him and turned toward her, "how is the little fellow today?"

"Just the same," she helped her self to a cigarette, lit it, and sank far down in an easy-chair, stretching her feet out before her. "I've put her to bed and locked the door on her; she won't stir. She doesn't even get up in the morning until I tell her to. She seems slower, stupider every day. Her writing, too, is awful—more incoherent."

He nodded. "She's strong physically, though. By the way, has she been hanging around Kestley any more? I found her sitting under the trees with him the other day."

"She's forgotten him," Anita was positive. "Notices him no more than she does any one else."

"That's all right then," Bristow dropped the subject; his mind had turned in another direction. "Speaking of Kestley, though, I think I can use him."

He picked out a letter from among those he had read, and tossed it across the desk to her. It was a request from a well-known magazine for a series of popular articles covering modern methods of dealing with the insane, and named a handsome figure as payment.

"That is worth considering," he said, "not only for its advertising value, but because it gives me a chance, a chance of high authority that it is wise to cultivate."

"He's awfully good," Bristow said, "but it means no end of research, consulting the authorities, taking notes of notes and then, top of it all, the work of writing. Now for me! I had just about decided to write and refuse when I happened to think of Kestley."

"But Kestley wouldn't take the job," Anita cried impatiently. "He would help you out that much. He hates you like poison."

"Returned obediently," and he'd do it for a favor. But it's bound to strike him that the position would offer opportunities. He might happen on something incriminating that would serve to corroborate his story. He'd think of the chances to communicate with the great outside."

"How does the alderman feel about the way things are going?" she asked restlessly. "I saw him when he got in this afternoon, but it was only for a moment, and we didn't have a chance to talk. He's looking better for his trip."

"Oh, yes," Bristow granted; "and he's pleased, very well pleased. Indeed, with the way everything's been handled, why shouldn't he be? He wants to see us both at half-past nine for a conference," he glanced at his watch; "so you'd better look in on sister now, and then go on up to his rooms."

She slowly drew herself up from her chair and then stood waiting, submissive and yet hotly impatient. "You've forgotten something."

"What? What?" He looked as if he had not an idea what she meant, but over his face was a glimmer of what at that moment she would have heartily agreed with Kestley was his maddening smile. "Ah, I see, a kiss." He repaired his omission, but lightly. She threw her arms about his neck and pressed her cheek to his.

"Run now," he gave her a little push. "The alderman hates to be kept waiting, you know."

"Thank you," she said through her shut teeth the angry fire in her eyes, drying her starting tears. And then, with head thrown up, she walked out of the room.

LETTER FROM MRS. MARY ALDEN FREEMONT TO HER SON, JOHN ALDEN FREEMONT

My Dear John:

I am sending you the enclosed letter written to me by Leslie, that you may see how I have been insulted by that thoughtless and selfish girl who has married. I also want you to see what she has written for I am sure it is not true that you have kept from her my letters to you.

Surely nothing that I have written you could "fret" a high minded and dutiful wife. It might however bring a thoughtless girl to her senses and make her remember that perhaps there was a sad old woman somewhere in the world to whom she might give a modicum of thought.

Of course I cannot believe her when she says she will do anything to make me happy, for surely she must know that I have not been happy since your marriage with her. She has never invited me to her house except in the most perfunctory way. She has only written me a very few letters and I have never kept you from writing me, although I understand, John, you never were a very good correspondent.

If this girl ever has a boy of her own—I do not for one moment consider that nameless child you have taken into your house can be either of you a real son—I am sure she will understand what it means to be neglected.

I am your mother, John. I am the woman who brought you into the world—the mother who cared for you all through your tender years. What can any woman who never met you until after you had reached manhood do that will equal the sacrifices of your mother?

No man should love anyone as he does his mother. If he does, then all her pain, all her sacrifice, all her years of care are as lost.

Leslie says she hopes I know I have gained a daughter. She seems to take it to herself that I would be glad of having any kind of daughter. John, I have never seen but one woman whom I would have liked for a daughter and that woman is dear Priscilla Bradford, who has been a real daughter to me ever since you were married.

She has even told me that she would never marry as she considered, now that you have deserted me, that her love and duty must be given to me.

But all these things that I am saying to you are as naught beside the crowning insult of sending me her check? What do I want of her check? Has my son turned over his entire bank account to his wife? I cannot understand what she means by doing this. This is terrible. I did not quite get the import of it until after I had cashed it and dear Priscilla told me exactly how it looked to her.

If I had not already cashed the check I should certainly have sent it back and asked you to reimburse me. As it is, I am so unhappy, so miserable, so poor and alone that I can write no more.

Nude Dancing Ends Under Prussian Ban
 BERLIN, Sept. 23.—Prussia today gave the knockout blow to indecent prize fights and nude dancing.

Acting upon orders from headquarters, police forbade all barelegs, leopards and other amusements, places from putting on such attractions.

The order is based on the special regulations passed by the reichstag in February. It was issued in August, effective today, the intervening time being granted to give lady boxers and nude dancers a chance to get new jobs or some clothes.

Battling Bertha will either have to go back to work or attempt to get a contract outside of Prussia. Other divisions of Germany, however, will probably follow suit, limiting the female fighter entirely from German sporting life.

"What will you do now that you can't put on your nude dance?" the United Press asked one famous advocate of back to nature dancing.

"I'll simply put on a few collars, winter is coming on, anyhow, and that's just my coat to heat the dance a while, perhaps I will be warm enough to put on the old-fashioned nude dance. And if my dressings or weakened shoulder-strings—who can charge me with violating the laws? Accidents will happen, you know."

Price of Blood Going Up; Now $35 a Pint
 PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 23.—The price of blood has gone up and the day of the volunteer who used to offer a pint for emergency transfusions is long past. Physicians at the University Hospital are now advertised in newspapers for volunteers to give a pint of blood to a recently widowed mother of five children who was in a critical condition.

Eleven persons applied to the hospital in answer to have the correct type of blood for transfusion. They were offered $25 for a pint of blood but they would not accept, saying that the market quotation for blood today is $35 a pint up.

EEL-WORM EATING ALFALFA ON COAST
 WASHINGTON, Sept. 23.—Ability of quarantining the states of California, Oregon, Washington, Idaho and Colorado to prevent the spread of the destructive eel-worms from other states was under discussion at a hearing before Secretary of Agriculture, William C. Clegg today.

The pest, which is particularly destructive to alfalfa, has been reported to the department as having been observed in the vicinity of Watsonville, Calif., Hamilton, Ore., Yakima, Wash., Parma, Idaho, and Canyon City, Colo. To prevent its invasion of other states discussion of a quarantine was ordered to take place here today.

The eel-worm has not hitherto been encountered in this country. The source of its principal ravages until now has been South Africa.

Road of Remembrance

For Late Pres. Harding

LIMA, Ohio, Sept. 23.—The hour of starting the first memorial, a road of remembrance, for Warren G. Harding goes to this (Allen) county, says a statement received here from Charles Lathrop Pack, president of the American Tree association at Washington, D. C. The work has been inaugurated by a local newspaper and Lynn H. Thompson of Lima, who will provide 4,000 trees for lining the Harding highway a distance of 20 miles.

Van Wert county and Harding county will continue the highway planting to Marion, according to present plans. Six thousand school children of Allen county will do the planting under the direction of the Lima Automobile club, which will provide the transportation for the school children and the tools. Mrs. Warren G. Harding will be invited to plant the first tree. If the other counties do their planting at the same time as Allen county, the project will be completed to the Indiana line.

"On the day set for the tree planting," says the message from Pack, "the country will see the beginning of one of the most unusual tree-plantings and the start of the first road of remembrance in honor of the late president. It is fitting that Ohioans should take the lead in this work."

"Tree planters of Pennsylvania have registered thousands of trees and the individual tree planting will run into the thousands, for fall tree planting is now in full swing, reports to the association show. The Nature Study club of Indiana is again planting trees throughout the state."

Perspiration is a continuous process, invisible during periods of inactivity or sedentary life. Better condition of play, exercise or work, even in middle age or infirm adults, which will promote a healthy circulation and convey an abundance of blood glands to the skin, is desired for increased perspiration.

Physicians of the present day are well aware that the skin does not play the important part it was formerly supposed to perform in elimination. But it is a great cleansing agent and a sort of health barometer, which clearly indicates a good circulation by normal perspiration. In addition to this activity, it is better than any medicine in the preservation of health and prevention of disease. It may be said to remove the cause of many disorders, such as blood poisons, fat excess and clogged glands and is a means of giving renewed strength and body tone.

Perspiration assists the digestion by the promotion of a healthy appetite. The exhalation and renewal of both body and mind are also due to proper digestion. Good appetite insures a good supply of blood for the body. Good food makes good blood. The life stream of good blood coursing through your body gives good skin activity by exercise and perspiration and so the wheels of body action are kept in healthy motion.

MISS MARY M'FARLAND BECOMES BRIDE OF KYLE ELAM MONDAY EVENING

WEDDINGS continue to hold the chief interest of society during the early fall days, one of the smartest of which being that of Miss Mary McFarland, youngest daughter of Capt. and Mrs. A. McFarland, and Mr. Kyle Elam last evening, which brought to a finale a succession of charming pre-nuptial hospitalities which have been given the past few weeks for the former.

The wedding was a simple but beautiful ceremony at the First Methodist Episcopal church, with Rev. V. A. Godfrey, pastor of the First M. E. church, South, reading the impressive marriage service.

Gorgeous pink and white roses were used with artistic effect in the adornment of the church, the decorations being mainly confined to the chancel. Trailing ivy vines and oleanders of the chosen hues formed an attractive background for the group of the bride party, and tall vases and floor baskets, topped with fluffy bows of pink tulle and filled with the lovely blooms graced vantage points about the altar, the baskets outlining a pathway to the altar. Reserved seats for the guests were marked with streamers of white tulle.

Miss Marie LeMaster, school girl friend of the bride, was at the piano and accompanied Jack Storey, who sang "Until" before the ceremony, the soft strains from "Lullaby" into "Lullaby's" wedding march announcing the time for the ceremony.

The bride, who is an unusually attractive girl, wore a handsome traveling frock of dark blue velvet with trimmings of metallic ribbon, and her smart hat and accessories of gray harmonized in charming manner.

She wore a platinum fork and her corsage of bride's roses and lilies of the valley gave the bride's touch in her lovely costume.

Miss Dorey Smith, maid of honor, was the bride's only attendant. Her gown of chiffon velvet with lace trimmings was very becoming and her modish hat and accessories were in harmony. She wore a corsage of sunburst roses.

By Kyle of Beaumont, a cousin of the groom, served as best man. Immediately after the ceremony and congratulations, Mr. Elam and his party broke left for a wedding tour of Houston, Galveston, San Antonio, and Austin, and upon their return will make their home at 2818 Ninth street. Their home is a wedding gift of the bride's father, Capt. A. McFarland.

Mr. and Mrs. Elam are both well known in Port Arthur and are popular members of the college student circle in the city. Mrs. Elam by her graciousness of manner and charming personality, has endeared herself to a host of friends in Port Arthur. She is a graduate of the Port Arthur High school and has attended both Baylor College and Texas University. Mr. Elam also attended the University of Texas, having met his bride while they were both students at the university. He is connected with the purchasing department of the Gulf Refining company. Mr. and Mrs. Elam were popular in college circles, and their popularity among the younger set here being evidenced by the many charming affairs which have been tendered them since the announcement of the engagement a few weeks ago.

E. districts, spoke of the various societies, outlining the plans for the district convention which will be held in Beaumont at the Westminister Presbyterian church on Sept. 28, 29 and 30.

The convention will open at 6 o'clock Friday evening with a supper, following which the convention sessions will begin at 7:45 o'clock. KLAN CROSS IS SLASHED DOWN

Oklahoma Guardsmen Act at Sapulpa

SAPULPA, Okla., Sept. 25.—Governor Walton's soldiers invaded Sapulpa last night and took down the Ku Klux Klan cross which has been standing on a hill overlooking the city.

Despite the fact that Governor Walton ordered all Klan crosses removed from the hill every night since the order went into effect.

An unsuccessful attempt was made last Wednesday night to remove the cross by placing a charge of dynamite at its base. This, however, did little damage, breaking a few light bulbs and weakening the base.

After the appearance here of a militia captain late yesterday, the general rumor was that the cross would be taken down. Shortly after nine o'clock last night a truck carrying about fifteen soldiers drove into town. After driving around for a short time, they stopped at a local hotel and asked the way to get to the cross. After being informed as to the direction, they immediately set out for the hill. They were gone about fifteen minutes, and then the lights on the cross were sent to go out. No other movements were seen on the hill.

Why Children Tell What We Call Lies

CHICAGO, Sept. 25.—Lies told by children are often deductions of infantile logic with no intent to deceive, and deserve the status of a psychologist rather than a reprimand or a whipping, according to Professor A. N. Farmer.

"Mendacity in children recently has been the subject of investigation in France," said Professor Farmer. "The result has been clearer understanding of a child's mode of reasoning. A French psychologist says, the mind of the adult operates in five ways, classified as follows: Deductive reasoning; inductive reasoning, in which an accumulation of facts furnishes proof; cursory induction based on hasty which justifies a theory but does not constitute proof; belief founded upon association of ideas; and perceptive belief.

"The logic of the child is concerned only with the last three processes. A little girl said she had met the Virgin Mary, who had given her a peach. It turned out that she had met a woman in white with a blue belt who reminded the child of an image of the Virgin she had seen. A little boy said that on a journey he had seen people and houses no bigger than his toys. The explanation was that from a high hill he had seen people and their houses in a valley diminished to toy size by distance.

FORD TO FIGHT SALE OF GORGAS

Officials Forecast Next Step For Muscle Shoals

WASHINGTON, Sept. 25.—Official Washington believes House Ford-Muscle Shoals project has fallen through as the result of the tie in the war department of the Gorgas power plant to the Alabama Power company.

The Gorgas plant was included in House bill yesterday by Secretary of War Weeks.

It is Gorgas plant was included in Ford's Muscle Shoals bill. He said he would not bid for Muscle Shoals without Gorgas. He has not replied to a request by President Coolidge and Secretary Weeks that he eliminate the Gorgas plant from his offer.

The only word that has come from him on it was indirect.

Weeks yesterday got a telegram from W. B. Mayo, Ford's chief engineer on the Muscle Shoals plan, expressing surprise at the sale and stating that Ford was away from Detroit on business. Some officials were inclined to think that Ford would fight in whatever way is possible to overturn the sale of the Gorgas plant to the power company, having his objections on an expedition rendered months ago by Attorney General Clegg.

The contract with the Alabama Power company, giving it an exclusive option to purchase the plant, was made without due authority. This contract has been under fire for a long time. It was made during the war by many officers in charge of the Muscle Shoals intricate project.

"Daughters of the Rich"

The human quality of "Daughters of the Rich," together with the elaborate method of production and the infinite care which has been taken in the arrangement of the trifling details that are so necessary in making the action colorful and convincing, brings the picture into the class which appeals especially to the high-class audience. The production appears to have had a good deal of money spent on it in many of the settings are elaborate costumes are becoming and beautiful; glimpses of Paris society, including the luxurious apartment of Mlle. Giselle, who incidentally is equipped to answer her telephone while she sits in her bath.

One of the picture's strong points is the centralization of the main threads of the plot. One of the best of the picture is that of Count Makoffoff by Stuart Holmes.

This is an eccentric character which Mr. Holmes plays from a decided comedy angle, and is likely to get a laugh every time he appears on the scene—foppish and rollicking and decked with an eye-glass, Ethel Shannon is excellent as Mlle. Giselle, a woman living on the bounty of the count. Miriam Cooper is charming as Maud Barbette, whose romance is out into by a jealous rival, and Ruth Clifford is splendid as Sally, forced to marry a title, yet loving her friend's sweetheart, Gaston Glass.
